

ONLY FAMILY IN MIND OF CONDEMNED MAN AS HE HEARS TIDINGS

A series of seven cartoon panels showing a character's daily routine: getting hit by a mallet, waking up, running in a top hat, playing a game, running from a hat, walking in the rain, and relaxing on a lawn chair.

Our baby will be weaned a year from the first of next September. Of course, he will have some light food before that time, but only a little white of egg and gruel. After he begins to eat he will have cereals, fresh, good meat, soft boiled eggs, barley broth, starchy foods in moderation and fruit. He will not be given fruit until after he is three years old and has all his teeth. If we can obtain tuberculosis germ proof, perfectly clean cow's milk he will be allowed to drink all he can. From the very first our baby will sleep in the open air as God intended all men to. His clothes will be very few and simple.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley.

Chapter 11.

The whole detective force of Greater Boston was at work on the poisoning mystery very within a few days after the girl's death. But they obtained no help from Richeson, who remained secluded at the Edmunds home, seeing no one and keeping to his room. A doctor went into the house occasionally, and there were rumors at one time that Richeson was in a state of

The offer of this reward, it is believed, had a good deal to do with the bringing out of the most important evidence in connection with the tragedy. That was the story of how Richeson bought cyanide of potassium from William Hahn, a druggist he knew, of Newton Centre.

The motive for the crime had been found—Richeson was to marry Violet Edwards, a richer girl than Avis Linnell. He wanted to get rid of the pretty cholo-slayer.

Richardson hesitated. It looked as though he were about to make a statement. Then he pulled himself together.

"No," he replied, "I have nothing to say."

Richardson got out of bed. The shock of his arrest had almost stunned the man. His face went pale white. He was all a tremble. While he was dressing, his fingers quivered and his limbs shook.

He tried to fasten his tie and could not.

"Oh, by the way, Hahn, I've got a dog at home. She is constantly whining around and is making a great disturbance and I am anxious to get something to put her out of the way."

"I didn't know you kept a dog," remarked Hahn.

"We've been all night trying to get into your house," Watts told Mr. Edmonds.

"I am very sorry to have kept you waiting all night," replied Mr. Edmonds.

"We heard the noise, but I thought it was made by the newspaper men."

"We are here," said Watts, "to arrest Mr. Richardson for the murder of Avis Lila."

The language below is exactly that of the conversation as it was related by the police after the visit. Farewell? Dr. Richardson then realize that it was to "farewell" forever?

Across the hall in a bedroom was Mr. Edmunds. She was ill as a result of the shock attendant on the tragedy. She had been awakened by the noise. She lay trembling in bed. Her mother was with her.

use "Arson" as a house, for it will smell badly, and it isn't as quick as I wish, the dog to die. Haven't you got something else that you can give me which will do the work instantly?"

"Yes," replied Hahn, "I have got some cyanide of potassium, and that is almost instantaneous death, but a very dangerous poison to use or to have about the house."

"Just What I Want."

"Well, that is just what I want," said Hildebrand, "give me some of that."

Hahn procured a small vial and dropped a small lump of the poison in it. The pharmacist explained the nature of the drug and told Hildebrand to be careful and keep it safe.

"My attorney has informed me," said Mr. Edmunds, "that the police have the right to arrest Richeson."

"Where is Richeson?" was asked.

"He is asleep in the guest chamber, on the second floor. Come with me. The police followed Mr. Edmunds. They went to Richeson's door. Mr. Edmunds knocked in a low voice from within and came the reply:

"'Come in.'"

Richeson was in bed. Chief Inspector Dugan walked over to the side of the bed.

"You are the Rev. C. V. T. Richeson?"

"Yes," replied Richeson in a faint voice.

"I have to inform you that you are under arrest for the murder of Avis L. Bell," said Dugan. "Anything you

NINE MONTHS FOR ASHBURTON

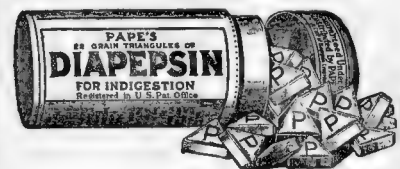

Charles F. Ashburton, a former member of the New York State Bar, was today sentenced to nine months in the House of Correction for the crime of larceny of a motor car. The car, a 1911 Buick, was stolen from the home of Ashburton's mother, Mrs. Mary Ashburton, in the city of New York. Ashburton was arrested on May 10, 1911, and held in custody for several months. He was then released on bail, but failed to appear in court. He was finally arrested on May 17, 1912, and charged with the same crime. The judge, Judge J. H. Williams, sentenced him to nine months in the House of Correction.

CALL WITNESSES FOR WEIL TRIAL

As rapidly as possible the witnesses wanted for the trial of Arthur M. Weil, charged with the murder of William J. Harrison, were called today by the district attorney, Mr. J. H. Williams. The trial is set for June 10, 1912, at the New York State Bar.

IF YOU CAN'T GET YOUR STOMACH REGULATED, EAT A FEW DIAPEPSIN!

Time It! In Five Minutes There Will be No Indigestion, Boursness, Heartburn, Gas or Dyspepsia.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—want an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable, you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs. Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief to indigestion, its certain unfailing action in regulating acid, your gastric stomach. Its many cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble have made it famous the world over. Keep this perfect stomach cure in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lies like lead, ferments and causes gas, forms gas, causes headache, dizziness and nausea, eructations of air and undigested food—remember it was Diapepsin that cured them. It is the only stomach ailment which vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who have been in trouble.

See Them In Our Blue Serge Suits—Superb!

The average blue serge suit is a COMMONPLACE. It is made by all tailors, worn by nearly all men, and its chief characteristic is an irritating resemblance to its fellows. There is a uniform LACK of INDIVIDUALITY in blue serge suits generally. But not so in HILTON blue serge suits. In the many models of blue serge suits we are now showing for Spring, you will discern in the tailoring a number of smart features and a general faultlessness of line and finish due primarily to "Knowing How."

Our "Natural" or "An-a-tom-ic" model in Blue Serge Suits presents the most beautifully tailored garment of its kind you ever saw. Twenty distinctive shades of Blue to choose from—navy, admiral, kingfisher, Danube, coronation, Gobein, blue finch, etc., etc. Every Serge Suit, regardless of price, absolutely guaranteed color-fast under any and all conditions or money refunded.

It is a delight to read a first-hand report from a person who has actually been there, and the first two chapters of this book were written by the author in 1934. It is interesting to note that the general impression of the country and the people was quite correct in the 1930's and remains so even in the 1960's. The river was still in a bad condition, and the people were still poor and illiterate. The only change was that the country was now a part of the United States, and the people were now citizens of the United States.

Only One Term for the President?
No.

Far Better TWO Terms, Better Disturbance and Mud-slinging, and All the Difficulties, Than a System Which Would Put the President Beyond THE PEOPLE'S REACH

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal Association.

A bill is introduced in Congress to increase the term of the President from four to six years AND TO MAKE IT ILLEGAL TO ELECT HIM TO A SECOND TERM.

At first glance, before you think about it, this seems a good idea. You say to yourself that the President will be in for six years. And we shall have all this disturbing turmoil and bother only once in six years instead of once in four years.

And the President, being in for six years, will have time to carry out his noble plans. And as it will be against the law to elect him after one term, he will not be influenced by public clamor, he will not be scheming to get re-elected.

It sounds very nice, but it is in reality very foolish.

As long as the President is permitted to think of a second term HE IS THINKING AND WORRYING ABOUT YOU, THE PEOPLE, WHO ALONE CAN GIVE HIM THAT SECOND TERM.

The big people pick out the public officials as a rule; they nominate them and they elect them the first time—the big people OF MONEY, we mean, of course.

But, while organized money can give ONE term, perhaps, as Mayor, or Governor, or President, IT CAN'T GIVE THE SECOND TERM UNLESS WITH YOUR CONSENT.

Therefore, the President who is elected once and who immediately thinks of being elected a second time, IS OBLIGED TO WONDER WHAT YOU, THE VOTERS, WILL THINK OF HIS CONDUCT.

You can see perfectly clearly that if he had only one term and couldn't get another HE WOULDN'T HAVE TO THINK ABOUT YOU AT ALL.

If the President could have only one term, and if you could give nothing to him after he finished that term in the way of reward for good service, WHY SHOULD HE THINK ABOUT YOU AT ALL?

He would probably go in owing election to the politicians and to the money influences generally. He would naturally think of them, for he would have no special reason to think of YOU.

Now, with a second term in sight, HE MUST THINK OF YOU WHO VOTE. He remembers that he made you promises before election, and he is more or less obliged to carry them out—thinking, as he does, of that second term.

And he knows that you are watching him, and he knows that you are making up your mind during the first four years as to what you will do when the second voting time comes. Therefore, he tries to establish a record that will gain your approval.

And having established a record, having committed himself to certain policies with the idea of getting your vote as his reward, during his FIRST term, the President cannot very well stuff himself by repudiating those policies and changing his position during the second term. Besides, he gradually comes to believe what he has been saying for four years.

It is hard enough to get good service out of your public servants at best. And it is only too easy for the big people that run the country—the handful that have millions to get what THEY want.

Your only hope is in making the President look to you for something—and about the only thing that the President looks to you for is a SECOND term.

Therefore, hang on to that second term. It is your only hope.

A Woman's Memorial to Men

Nothing nobler in sentiment and suggestion has grown out of the Titanic tragedy than the recent movement of the grateful women for a "Titanic Memorial to Heroic Manhood"—a woman's memorial to "Brave Men Who Died That the Women and Children Might Live."

Mrs. John Hay and Mrs. John Hay Hammond are leading the movement, and under the proposed plan of one dollar contributions from women alone, Mrs. William H. Taft heads the list of subscribers.

Another woman, enthused over the proposition, has pointed the way for larger contributions by giving one dollar for each of a thousand girls and women in a neighboring factory.

But the proposed great memorial arch designed for Washington, and representing the tribute of grateful women to brave men, is an epochal event in making monuments.

It is doubtful if there will be anywhere in the world anything like this memorial.

Men have builded monuments to men and monuments to women, and women have builded monuments to women.

But this is a monument by women to men—by women in the aggregate to men in the aggregate, from the weaker to the stronger, from the grateful to the gallant, from the saved to the savior of life.

It should be a revival of gallantry, a renaissance of chivalry, an inspiration to noble altruism and knightly courage all over the world.

And the time to build this memorial is now, while the tragedy of the Titanic and its heroism yet abide in the human soul. Don't wait for the afterthought and the reaction, but build now.

The women who build this monument are building for themselves—walling their womanhood safe within the chivalry of men. From the American dollar princess to the American housemaid, there should be swift and instant response.

He Never Had a Chance

That is what nine men out of ten who are failures say. Look out that you don't say it yourself.

NO. 2.

Yum was quick to learn anything outside of geography, arithmetic or history. He could do tricks with his hat, imitate a callopie, sing popular ditties, and at baseball was the idol of the gang.

The school teacher called him a master of the breadless arts.

He carried bats for the city team and learned to pitch. He could do most anything the regular pitcher could with the ball, and the boys were certain that his curves "broke better."

On Saturdays and Sundays Yum grabbed a piece of change here and there tossing them over the platter for the home team. His life was wrapped up in the game now and he quit school entirely.

What did a ball player want with penmanship and algebra? Nothing. They couldn't fool him; he knew.

Dorothy Dix Writes
The Married Woman Who Flirts with Boys the Meanest on Earth.

By DOROTHY DIX

There are men who are wroth to sheep's clothing, who prey upon young girls, and who are one of the menaces of society. There are women who are serpents to snakes and lures and diamonds, who prey upon young boys, who are equally dangerous, and who do just as much harm in the world. Every mother is on her guard against the evil man, and does her best she can to protect her daughter from him, but few mothers ever realize the danger their son is in from the unprincipled woman, or seek to guard him from an experience that may be as blighting to him as any misfortune that could befall his sister would be to her.

I do not speak here of the so-called "bad woman," the recognized and publicly branded kind, but of the one who is an enemy out in the open, who may be equally fought. Besides which, she is not half so dangerous to a boy as is the woman who is snug and good without and a charmer inside, who observes the letter of courtesy while breaking its spirit. At the worst the worst woman of society is a hypocrite, but the white-robed hypocrite, who is a serpent in sheep's clothing, is a more dangerous enemy.

Such a woman does not even play the game of seduction, she does not use her knowledge of life against the innocence, her experience against the ignorance, her guile against the simplicity, her cunning against the honesty, her selfishness against the selflessness, as a rule in the hands of a woman who is a flirt to make a boy a man, she is a flirt to make a boy a man, she is a flirt to make a boy a man, she is a flirt to make a boy a man.

Send Your Boy As Far from the Temptress as You Can

And don't talk about what a good woman Mrs. Blank is, and say how and you are that he has fallen under such a snare and seducing influence, break up the intimacy before Jimmy is twenty-four hours older. Send him

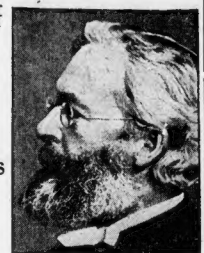

Parents' Duty to Guard Young Boys from These Vampires

That is what the married dirt does for every young boy who comes under her baleful influence. She kills the high and holy things for him. She leaves a wound on his soul that never heals. It is the duty of parents to protect their boys from these vampires as much as they can, and to do so by teaching them the crafty subtleties of a woman who is a flirt to make a boy a man, she is a flirt to make a boy a man, she is a flirt to make a boy a man.

The Audacity of
Prof. Arthur
Drews
—AND—
How Severity Is Sometimes a Kindness

Written for the American by

DR. C. H. PARKHURST

On entering, some years ago, the city of Stratford-on-Avon, the birthplace of Shakespeare, almost the first object that arrested my attention was a volume exposed in a shop-window and bearing the title, "Bacon was the author of Shakespeare."

Although there are five points in the life of the dramatist, stated, by so good an authority as Tennyson, to be absolutely trustworthy historically, yet there is a cast of mind that finds a peculiar and cranky kind of delight in arraying itself against the combined and established opinions of the age and in discrediting conclusions that have been long and confidently cherished by men who have been most conservative and judicious in their processes of judgment.

Since the time when, according to the Bible story, Adam proposed to ruin a query as to whether it was, after all, obligatory upon him to obey the command of the Lord, there have never been wanting people who, either out of conceit or out of distrust of human intelligence and belief that every mind but their own was a lying mind, have taken absurd and mischievous comfort in wantonly seeking to cut the ground out from under convictions that have been imperiously established in the general mind and that have borne the test and secured the endorsement of many long and thoughtful centuries.

The Professor Who Tries to Prove That Jesus Did Not Exist

A late example of this is afforded by the recently published work of Arthur Drews, professor of theology in the technical Hochschule at Karlsruhe, Germany, who, in a volume of three hundred pages, sets himself to what is to him, evidently, the very congenial task of proving that there has never been such a person as Jesus Christ.

Now, there is a kind of impudent audacity in the undertaking that is almost fitted to fascinate us by its immensity.

Commenting on the presumption, we simply resent with quiet contempt, but arrogance that is so colossal and cyclopean as that of the professor is staggering by the very fact of its monstrous proportions.

To stand up serenely in the face of twenty centuries of Christian intelligence, Christian scholarship and Christian experience, and to challenge that whole mass of mind as being the collective dupe of a bodiless idea and a silly delusion, involves on the part of our author a degree of intellectual immodesty and impertinence that should secure for him the title of psychological freak rather than that of theological professor.

Severity Is Often Necessary to Maintain Dignity of Authority

That a building as vast in its proportions and as immense in its pressure as Christianity can stand the tempests and the quaking of twenty centuries, is all the proof that a reasonable man either needs or wants to persuade him that underneath there is foundation commensurate in breadth and solidity with the structure that it upholds.

ANY person possessed of a generous and sympathetic spirit shrinks from the exercise of severity, and yet severity is very often necessary in order to maintain the dignity of authority, and not only that, but is quite likely to prove, in the long run, the finest form of mercy.

Or the fact is the case of a father dealing with his child. The time is almost certain to come when the young boy, realizing that he has a will of his own, sets in opposition to his father's will.

Now there are two parental policies that under such circumstances may be pursued.

The child can be coerced into obeying, and perhaps have some privilege allowed him in return for obedience.

The current policy can then and there settle the question for all time as to which of the two is to be master—a result that is never reached by lillyput or any process of barter.

A conflict to be decisive may wring the heart of the father and he fall of cost to the body of the child, but when it is once done it is done for always, and one thorough whipping may save the pain incident to a hundred half-way whippings.

The current policy of affixing small fines to the violation of certain statutes is another case where the desire to be merciful results in ten times the hardship that would result from the resolution to be severe.

A part of this is the fault of the Legislatures, and a part of it, chargeable to the unscrupulous sentimentality of the magistrates. Dealing out petty fines both impairs the dignity of the law and tempts to its violation.

Automobiles have, during the past two years, been driven in such a way as to result in 263 deaths in New York city alone.

Now, undoubtedly so far as those deaths have been the result of careless driving, at least a half, if not three-quarters, of such mortality would have been avoided if the first violations of auto statutes had been dealt with in a manner proportioned to the enormity of the crime.

Petty Sentence for Speeding Causes Death to the Innocent

As a rule people who can afford to own an automobile have no sense money as to care no more for a fine of ten dollars than a rhinoceros cares for a pin-prick.

The pettiness of the sentence encourages speeding, so that judicial sympathy with the criminal is the author of death to innocent.

This "slaughter of the innocents" would have a stop very promptly put to it if a scale of fines adequate to the criminality of the offence were established, legislatively, and if our magistrates would agree to put their warm sympathies in cold storage and deal with offenders with a severity commensurate with the seriousness of the offence and the just demands of the general public.
